The present invention relates to a synergistic fungicidal mixture of (I) and (II) according to claim 1. D1 (EP0988790) describes more general synergistic fungicidal compositions, where a plurality of possible selections exist for the two components. However, the present invention is comprised by D1.

None of the examples of D1 describes the composition claimed. The present application satisfies the criterion in PCT Article 33(2) because the subject matter of claims 1-11 is novel in relation to the prior art as defined in the Regulations (PCT Rule 64.1-64.3).

Since D1 discloses a plurality of examples with relatively small differences in comparison with the present invention, it would be expected prima facie that the claimed composition has a synergistic effect. Even though synergism is considered as basically unpredictable, the expert would find sufficient information in D1 that certain variations would likewise have the desired effect. However, the present application contains comparative tests which employ the most similar explicitly mentioned compounds of D1. These tests demonstrate clearly that the selection made in accordance with the invention not only allows a synergistic effect to be obtained, but also an improved synergistic effect in comparison with the most similar compositions which can be found in D1. This improvement was unexpected. The present application satisfies the criterion in PCT Article 33(3) because the subject matter of claims 1-11 involves an inventive step (PCT Rule 65.1-65.2).

The present application satisfies the criterion in PCT Article 33(4) because the subject matter of claims 1-11 is considered industrially applicable.
